How did writing Dreams in the Golden Country: The Diary of Zipporah Feldman, a Jewish Immigrant Girl differ from writing these other two books? Kathryn Lasky: Mostly it was the setting, the place — the East coast, New York City, the Lower East Side as opposed to the Midwest, the prairie. The center of Jewish culture has always been New York.

The dream about the Golden Country dream is a recurring dream. The Golden Country is his forever place; it's perfect. The appearance of the girl marks something new in the dream. The fact that she removes her clothes is intoxicating, and yet not for sexual reasons, but rather for her defiance of the party. Source(s) 1984
